Description:

From Cyprus Keller is not a man to mince words. By the end of the marathon he is about to run as this beguiling mystery begins, he will have served justice by committing murder. Broken into 26 chapters (plus epilogue) to mirror the 26.2 miles of a marathon, the tale follows the race, but first-person narrator Keller provides the backstory as he runs, unveiling the events that lead to him hunting down his quarry over the course of a marathon. Gradually, we learn how ex-cop and now professor of criminology Keller wound up in the middle of a murder investigation after the death of one of his students. Using his old cop skills to dig into the circumstances surrounding the student's death, he soon discovers that the student was conducting an investigation of her own, an effort that may have led to her death. The deeper Keller delves into the case, the more the body count grows. Hensley, a distance runner himself, artfully combines details of running a marathon with an engaging mystery possessing just the right amount of red herrings. --Eve Gaus

Review "Impressive first novel...artfully constructed mystery..." - Publishers Weekly "J.J. Hensley has tied together the world of distance running and crime investigation to create a book that fantastically explores the core concept of both: killer competition." - Ryan Foster, Australian middle-distance runner and national record holder "Much like a marathon course, Resolve is full of twists and turns, and one never knows what will happen just around the corner. However, one need not be a runner to enjoy the thrilling story of crime and drama. Resolve gives the reader the chilling sensation that the story could happen to anyone, making it all the more real." - Luke Watson, 3-time U.S. Olympic Trials Competitor "Cyprus Keller is not a man to mince words.
